Bloomersburg; SATURDAY MORN., JAN. 6, 1849.

1849.

The Planet we inhabit has performed one more revolution round the Sun, and we are again, as it were, taking a new start at the beginning of a new year.

The eyes of men are gradually opening. They are beginning to feel and to know, that, naturally, they are not the slaves and serfs of petty tyrants.

Looking to our own glorious Republic, seeing us happy and free, independent and flourishing, contemplating the beauty, harmony, and solidity of our institutions; the world was amazed at beholding the splendid resting upon the model republic in union and strength; ruled, and directed by the "divine right" people. The beacons of liberty were fired, the banners of ascendency American mountain top, and arks, wafted by the free winds of an across the Atlantic, have set fire

These revolutions have astounded the world—thrones and crowns have become wreaths in the hands of the people—kings and Cabinet ministers have expatriated themselves, and the long reigns of monarchs of such men as Metternich, who were for a long time led Europe by the nose, have been proved to be erroneous.

The revolutions and convulsions of the last year, no matter how disastrous may be their immediate consequences, must, in the end, be beneficial to man and to the world. Their blessings can only be estimated by time. The human race have during the last year, advanced a century, compared with the past. If nothing more were done than the awakening of the people, much good must have been eventually accomplished; but in the present state of affairs, no one can tell what will be the end, or where. The doctrine of persecution and coercion must be abandoned by all who would rule, and the time is fast coming, when, instead of directing, the ruler must be directed.

At such a moment, nothing can be more pleasing than the contemplation of the fact that the principle which is actuating the world; and under which the down-trodden nations of Europe are acting, is one of the cardinal doctrines of the Democratic party, to wit: "that man is capable of self government."

There is a weapon ever set, And better than the bayonet. A woman that comes down as still As snow flakes fall upon the soil; And executes a freeman's will, A lightning down the will of God, And from its power, to force no lock, An shield them—'tis the ballot box.

The Election in France.

Louis Napoleon elected President.

We are at length in possession of intelligence of the Presidential Election in France, which took place on the 10th of December. The information was conveyed to our shores on Sunday last, by the Steamer belonging to the Cunard line—the Europa—which sailed on the 16th ult., from England. The contest was mainly between Gen. Cavaignac, M. Lamartine and Louis Napoleon, and resulted in the triumphant election of young Napoleon Bonaparte.

Prince Louis, a full nephew to old Napoleon, is now placed in the executive chair, or on the execrable throne, whichever it may be? the latter, perhaps, as we suppose, the President is to live in quasi-royal state, judging from the liberalities—extravagance, we think—of the constitutional appointments allowed—a furnished palace, and a salary of six hundred thousand francs per annum, ($110,000), which is too much, by sixty thousand dollars. To what result, his elevation to the Chair of State will lead, and to what events it portends, time and experience alone must determine.

Having recently returned from exile, and been elected to the General Assembly, Louis Napoleon, issued an address to the people of France, in which, like all other office seekers he said many nice things and made many fair promises—laying down a rule of action, and framing a platform on which he would administer the affairs of government. Should he make the platform—his profession de foi—his public rule of conduct, then all may go well. In that platform he declared himself a Republican, and avowed his determination to maintain and to strengthen the republican institutions of France, and to count, first, last, and always, the glory and the happiness of his country. This is well; but coming from one who has been for many years, and until within a few months, a pretender to the throne of France, and whose pretensions are in our opinion as good or better than those of either of the two other pretenders—the Duke of Bordeaux and the Count of Paris—we can hardly be expected to yield our belief, with trusting faith, to all the fine words and fine promises to be found in the platform, until time and acts and facts shall show that he makes them is disposed to carry on and to carry out, honestly, all that he has promised so liberally. Vive la Republique Francaise!

France—Election of Louis Napoleon.

PARIS, Thursday, 10 P. M.—Up to this date, tranquility continues. Louis Napoleon, has been elected President. The election returns show a majority in favor of Prince Louis, similar in proportion to those already announced. Prince Louis proposes to raise General Cavaignac to the rank of Marshal of France.

A partial amnesty is still spoken of as likely to be presented to the Chamber, either by Gen. Cavaignac or the Ministry of France. It is understood that it will not include the prisoners of Vincennes.

The intention of promoting the election of M. Dufaure to the Presidency of the Chamber is revived, and will probably be carried into effect.

Marshal Bugeaud made his first appearance in the Chamber to-day, and was received in the Salle des Pas-perdus by M. Thiers and M. Moie. A great number of members of the Assembly have to-day left their cards at the hotel of Prince Louis.

The Proclamation of the President will probably be made about the 29th inst. A well informed Paris paper says, so far as we can judge from the incomplete returns that arrive to us from the Departments, the suffrages were divided in the following proportions: Louis Napoleon 66 per cent; Cavaignac 21 per cent; Ledru Rollin 6 per cent; Raspail 4 per cent; Lamartine 3 per cent. It is calculated that the communists who have been appointed to examine the votes, will have concluded their labors on Monday next, and that the National Assembly will, on Wednesday, proclaim the President of the Republic; we shall then, it is hoped, feel really assured of a period of tranquility and repose.

Postscript—France.

The latest news from France confirms Louis Napoleon's increasing popularity, and Cavaignac's downfall. The returns from the Provinces are even more decisive, as we anticipated, than the suffrages of the Parisians. In Paris the absolute majority of the votes over all competitors was nearly 20,000, and in the fifteen suburbs he had a majority of 20,000, and an absolute majority of 16,411 votes, out of the 30,000 votes polled for Prince Louis, whilst only 8000 voted for Gen. Cavaignac.

has been doubted on account of some serious disturbances and rioting that had taken place. Louis Napoleon's friends met and organized to suppress any outbreaks in case of his election.

Gen. Changarnier officially resigned the candidacy for the Presidency. M. Lamartine's friends were making great exertions to secure his election. On Saturday evening all Paris looked like one electoral meeting.

The Bonapartists were accused of an intention to assassinate Gen. Cavaignac. M. Thore, one of those persons who fled with Louis Blanc and Cavaignac, had arrived in Paris, on the eve of the election.

Letters received in Paris, on Saturday, from the provinces, state that Louis Napoleon's election would be the signal for a great monarchical rising. A large body of the National Guard have been ordered under arms for Sunday.

The troops, Garde Mobile, &c., would be confined to their barracks on Sunday, the day of the election. Letters from Marseilles announce that the expedition intended for Civita Vecchia had returned to an anchorage, but the troops had not yet been disembarked.

Notwithstanding all the excitement regarding the Presidency, funds had risen. The five per cent, on Saturday closed at 69f. to 15c. Letters from Paris, of Tuesday morning, say that the election for President of the Republic had definitely closed all over France, and enough was known to secure Louis Napoleon a larger vote than was expected by his most sanguine friends, he receiving a considerable more than a majority of votes over all the other candidates.

Accounts from all the different departments announce that the election was everywhere conducted on calm and dignified principles.

Still Later from France.

Letters from Paris, dated Tuesday evening, substantiate the previous accounts received, and state that Louis Napoleon's election engrosses all the attention of the people.

General Cavaignac was burnt in effigy amidst a large throng of people assembled at the Place du Theatre.

Prussia.

There were alarming riots at Memel on the 4th inst. The town was completely in the hands of the populace for four or five hours, during which time great excesses were committed.

The King of Prussia, wearied with factions opposition, has dissolved the Parliament and promulgated the new constitution, in which all the liberties conceded by his subjects in March last are confirmed, with some modifications as the state of the monarchy seem to require. There are to be two Chambers, a Chamber, consisting of 180 members, and a lower chamber of three years—of summoning with the King's suffrage.

Prince Frederick William, General of the Army, made his first appearance in the Chamber to-day, and was received in the Salle des Pas-perdus by M. Thiers and M. Moie. A great number of members of the Assembly, on the same day, left their card at his hotel.

On the same day Louis Bonaparte's proclamation of President was to be issued about the 29th Dec.

PRUSSIA.—At Memel, on the 4th December, the most alarming riots took place. On the 5th the entire town was in possession of the populace for four hours, during which time great excesses were committed.

AUSTRIA.—The military executions for political offences still continue. The cholera is raging fearfully at Presburg.

IRELAND.—All is tranquil. Lord Clarendon was formally received on his return to the Vice Royal Lodge. The usual attitude of confidence was voted to him, coupled with recommendations for a removal of grievances under which the country labors. His Excellency's reply is temperate, and disclaims any design on the part of the Government to exclude Catholics from juries.

ITALY.—The revolution in Rome has terminated by the flight of the Pope, the head of the Roman Catholic Church. One of the most popular princes that ever ascended the papal throne is now an exile and wanderer. The Pope, it appears, after the scenes last described, remained a prisoner in his palace, protected from personal violence by the French Ambassadors.

The Pope, in fleeing from Rome, took refuge at Naples, and was under the protection of the King. His Holiness refused to go to France, and has signed a protest declaring all the late acts void.

AUSTRIA.—The Emperor has abdicated in favor of his nephew. The new Ministry, by its President, published an address containing the policy of the new Emperor, in which he pledges to maintain the liberty of the country.
